Italians Make an Attack at Mardon's.

There was quite a little excitement on Saturday when a swarm of Italians (bees) attacked the home of Charley Mardon.

After being stung several times by what she called "little yellow devils" Mrs. Mardon sent out a call for help. Charlie Dickan answered the call and found that a swarm of bees had decided to locate in the walls of the house. After tearing off some siding Charlie coaxed the bees into the hive after which everybody was happy.

Charlie reports that after getting the bees settled at home they went right to work making honey.

Free Treatment In Cancer Cases

A step of far reaching importance in provincial health was taken this week with the announcement of Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, minister of health, that the provincial government is now prepared to provide free surgical treatment for cancer sufferers, upon recommendations of the Alberta Cancer Clinic. At the last session of the legislature an appropriation of thirty thousand dollars was made for this purpose. Directed by Dr. G. H. Macdonald who is recognized as one of Canada's outstanding cancer specialists. Free clinics in Calgary and Edmonton have handled eighteen hundred cases since they were opened in 1941.

Up to now free diagnosis, x-ray, and radium treatments have been given but according to the director only 40% of those sent to the clinic were found to be suffering from cancer, and the remainder were sent home relieved of all worry. He stresses that early diagnosis and early treatment are the best means to eliminate this growing disease and intimates that the necessary step in the Alberta Cancer program will be free provision of hospital facilities.

Mrs. Slight of Hollywood, California, was visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Booker last weekend. Mrs. Slight was a former resident of Didsbury.

Will Organise for Air Cadets

Flt.-Lieut. W. M. Bowman, of No. 4 Training Command, met with a few citizens Monday noon with the object of organizing an Air Cadet Unit at Didsbury.

Flt.-Lieut. Bowman explained the objects of the cadet unit stating that 25 boys between the ages of 15 to 17 together with four officers would be required to form the unit.

The training will cover a period of 2 years and will give credits that would place any cadet recruit in an advanced position on joining the R.C.A.F. It would also give a student 2 credits toward his High School diploma. There was no compulsion on any member of the unit to join the Airforce upon completion of training, it was explained.

As Mr. A. W. Reiber, principal of the schools who has already taken Air Cadet training and will probably head the unit, was absent from town it was decided to delay organization until early in September.

A temporary committee was set up to call a meeting for the organization.

Calling Old Soldiers to Enlist

Major J. H. Gairnor, M.C., District Recruiting Officer of Military District No. 13, announced that commencing Monday morning, August 10th, four mobile recruiting units of the Veterans Guard of Canada set out in four different directions to cover practically every town and village in the province of Alberta, seeking recruits for the Veterans Guard of Canada.

Army Tank Battalion, (Calgary Regiment), who will cover the territory south of Calgary to include Macleod, Pincher Creek, Milk River, Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Empress, Brooks, Bassano and all the districts surrounding, also as far north as Red Deer and district, and west to Rocky Mountain House.

Veterans who are interested in enlisting are also advised that special arrangements for "harvest leave" have been completed and that arrangements for same may be made if so desired. The recruiting party will be in Didsbury from 10 to 10:30 on Monday, August 17, at C. E. Reiber's office.

NOTICE

A Clean Community acts as a preventive against disease: "Each householder can and should be a guardian of HEALTH."

The dread fly—carrier of disease—is again with us.

Every effort should be made to keep your premises fly-proof. Burn all garbage, but if it cannot be burnt, wrap well and place in fly-proof container, for regular removal by the scavenger. Have windows and doors properly screened and if the flies get in, swat 'em.

A suggestion re outside toilets: a pail of old car oil poured in once or twice during the summer will prevent flies gathering. The garages and service stations will, no doubt, be glad to furnish the oil which has been drained from cars—ask them.

Your co-operation in the past is appreciated, give us it again, for a clean town free from disease.

Nazis Face Difficulties

DURING THE THREE YEARS of the war the Nazis have had many victories and have acquired many thousands of square miles of territory. Up until the present time in most cases it has appeared that Hitler has had the advantages of greater numbers of men and machines, and frequently time has also been his ally. It has often been pointed out that as his conquests increased so did his responsibilities, and if one may judge by the stories which from time to time reach the outside world from Occupied Europe, it appears that the enforcing of the New Order must take much of the time and attention of the conquering Fuehrer. The activities of the "underground army" in Europe have been combatted by wholesale murder of the conquered peoples, yet they do not decrease and will no doubt continue until the armies of the United Nations join them in force in a drive towards the heart of Germany.

The Spectre Of Famine

Other forces, at which Hitler cannot strike as easily as he can at defenceless people, are also working against him. From time to time there have been stories of food shortages in Europe. Recently Joseph W. Grigg, writing from London for the British United Press, reported that the German radio has admitted that eight million acres of crops were destroyed by the extreme cold last winter, which was said to be the most severe in one hundred and fifty years. The coming harvest is expected to be very small, for bad weather and insects have retarded growth, and there is said to be a shortage of six hundred thousand farm workers. Potatoes and other vegetables, Mr. Grigg reports, are more scarce than they have been since 1918, and vegetables are being rationed at the rate of one pound a person each week. Farmers in Germany have been ordered to give their entire crops to the government, keeping nothing for themselves. For violation of this law, the Gestapo has decreed penalties ranging from fines of one hundred thousand marks, to death.

Hatred Is Growing

There is also reported to be a grave shortage of fats and butter, and due to weather conditions there is an acute lack of fodder for cattle. The report continues that similar conditions exist in France, where farmers are selling such products as they have on the "Black Markets" rather than through government regulations. Although Hitler has sent many German workers to the Ukraine in an attempt to gather supplies, it is thought unlikely that he will receive a great deal from there, where the crop is said to be poor. With increased food restrictions, it is unlikely that the already poorly-fed people of Europe will feel more kindly toward those who have brought all this misery upon them. Although the Nazis may yet win a few more battles with men and machines, there is inevitably growing a tide of revolution in Europe, which linked with the growing striking power of the United Nations, will one day bring about the end of Hitler's New Order and of all those who aided in its prosecution. It is known that starvation of the population in Germany had a great deal to do with her final collapse in 1918 and there is no doubt that this force is beginning to work again, and that it will be one of the weapons which will again bring about the defeat of the enemy.

Salads lend themselves so readily to decorative effects that for many years they had no more important part in diet than just that. But now, besides being highly decorative they are regarded by nutritionists as vital to the well-balanced diet. Rich in minerals and vitamins, the mixed salad or lettuce alone is becoming a staple food.

LETTUCE ALONE IS SALAD

Epicures prefer lettuce salad mixed in a wooden bowl with wooden fork and spoon. Housewives prefer them because they are so easy to prepare. After following directions once or twice, anyone can make an excellent salad, and make it of just a few odds and ends but always beginning with fresh, crisp lettuce, either leaf or head.

HERE'S HOW

Into the salad bowl put salt, pepper and paprika in quantities your judgment suggests and your taste confirms. (Use extra salt (iodized) in summer to help prevent ill effects by heat.) Add three tablespoons of vinegar, preferably taragon, and six or eight tablespoons of salad oil. Mix thoroughly, adding a button of peeled garlic if you want to be seriously regarded as a salad maker, then chopped celery, especially the green leaves, chicory, water cress, grated carrot or raw cauliflower. Grated cheese, well seasoned or definitely aged adds zest. Then the lettuce, a whole head leafed out. Stir up thoroughly and serve in generous portions with crackers or thin well-buttered real whole wheat bread.

RABBITS DON'T MIND

Rabbits may enjoy wilted lettuce, humans, especially youngsters don't. There'd be fewer salad-refusers if the vegetables, fruit and lettuce were always appetizingly fresh and crisp.

EVERY DAY IS SALAD DAY

There is a salad for every day in the year and it is important to develop your taste for them because of threatened shortages of canned goods. A postal card to the Western Division Health League of Canada, 111 Avenue Road, Toronto, Ontario, will bring you a free vitamin chart for ready reference and a booklet "Salads that are Different."

FAITH

Trust in the Lord with all thine heart; and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and he shall direct thy paths. Proverbs 3:5, 6.

While reason is puzzling herself about the mystery, faith is turning it into her daily bread and feeding on it thankfully in her heart of hearts. Frederick D. Huntington.

A saving faith comes not of a person, but of Truth's presence and power. Soul, not sense, receives and gives it.—Mary Baker Eddy.

The Individual Citizen's Army

A Weekly Column About This And That In Our Canadian Army.

By Alan Maurice Irwin

Some of the men who come in for more than their percentage of wise-cracks in the Canadian, or the British, or the American—and probably in the German and Japanese, for that matter—Army are the Intelligence Officers. The reason is obvious—but the facts don't substantiate the kidding.

Those of us on the outside are apt to think of "Secret Service" and to conjure up visions of daring spies who disguise themselves as organ-grinders or vegetable salesmen or glamorous syrens or something like that. People like E. Phillips Oppenheim are responsible for that idea.

I am not saying that there is not a certain percentage of clever espionage work done by the intelligence staffs of all armies but I do know that for every disguised operative who sneaks around in enemy territory there are a hundred careful, meticulous workers who spend long hours in offices at General Staff Headquarters sifting little bits of information that reach them from many sources.

They have a long, trying and arduous job to do, a job that calls for keen analysis, infinite painstaking—which has been called "genius"—devotion to duty and practical imagination. Nothing is too trivial for them to note, nothing so big that it can hide wanted facts from them. As you follow through the organization of your Army you find intelligence officers at Division, Brigade and Unit Headquarters, all engaged in the vastly important job of gathering information that will be of value to the High Command.

How do you imagine, for instance, that our official communiques are able to state that "so many men and guns composed the opposing force"?

Don't think that some prisoner broke down and told it. To begin with no individual soldier below the rank of a general would know it. And, it must be remembered, International Law protects a soldier from answering questions other than his name, rank, etc., if he is captured.

That is, of course, when you are dealing with an enemy who respects International Law.

But when you have a number of intelligence officers trained in their jobs, questioning a large number of prisoners on different parts of the front and rapidly forwarding their information through the channels provided to a central point where it is all correlated and analyzed it is surprising to the layman how much accurate information of incalculable value to the General Staff can be obtained even from answers that adhere to the instructions given to all soldiers to reveal nothing of their side's dispositions to their captors.

The same thing applies to the innocent little remarks some of us make at times to our friends, or to casual strangers we meet on the train or in a street car or at some gathering. We may think we are being very circumspect, we may feel that the information that our next door neighbour's boy is home on his last leave does not convey anything. It doesn't in itself, especially if we have been very careful not to say whether he is going east or west—but, and this is a big but, if in five or six other towns five or six other people let out similar information something like this may happen.

Let us assume that the five or six soldiers referred to are from three or four different units. The innocent remarks are collected by enemy agents and relayed to a central point. At once it is known that in the next few days a contingent of however many troops those four units represent is going overseas. To that same point come little bits of other information—gathered, for instance, in a tavern or coffee shop near a railway yard where a yard foreman or one of his helpers innocently remarks to a colleague that he has "to make up a 14-car special tomorrow for the port of Suchandsuch." The central correlator of information has an approximation of the time and size of the movement.

That's all he needs! The next step is to send word to a raider command that within so many days a troop convoy may be expected to move from "Suchandsuch." Simple, isn't it?

So let's keep our mouths shut. And let's ask no questions of our soldier, sailor and airmen friends.

Remarkable Success Has Been Accomplished During The War In The Dehydration Of Foods

SCIENTISTS have long investigated the possibility of devising a concentrated meal in a tablet and they seem to be approaching that goal. "Pep" tablets are given to soldiers which enable them to continue fighting for a long time without becoming exhausted. Another aspect of the concentrated food problem which research workers have been exploring with remarkable success since the war is the dehydration of foods.

It is of particular importance to the British people. Dehydration has made great strides in the United States during the past six or seven years, and it has been applied to every kind of vegetable. Millions of Canadian eggs are now being dehydrated and sent overseas. An immense amount of shipping space is being saved in this way. Recently it was stated that enough vegetables to furnish sufficient for a dozen people could be carried in a vest pocket. Dried-out vegetables or fruit need only be put in water for them to resume their normal condition without loss of vitamin content.

And now there is dehydrated butter.

As a result of research work by the Dairy Research Institute, New Zealand is now producing dehydrated butter or dried butterfat, and the British government has already contracted to take up to 20,000 tons of this product.

The possibilities of producing dried butter fat were investigated a few years ago when it was believed a market existed for it in certain parts of the world not served by refrigerator ships. After the outbreak of the war the deterioration of the shipping position caused a progressive reduction in exports of creamery butter, and after a period the complete elimination of exports of whey butter. In view of the resultant surpluses the matter assumed very great importance, and a satisfactory method of processing whey butter with the plant available was devised. A trial shipment of 400 tons was made some months ago to England and was very well received. The opportunity for large-scale operations therefore presented itself.

Only pure unsalted whey butter is used in the manufacture of dry butterfat though experiments are being carried out to provide an outlet for creamery butter as well. St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Perilous Adventure

Aviator Bitten By Snake While 3,000 Feet Up In The Air

Snake-bitten 3,000 feet in the air. Lieut. Robert Vaught, 24, United States Army, gave this report on a perilous adventure recently aloft and aground:

While flying 75 miles from his base Vaught noticed a peculiarly-marked snake near his left foot. He put the plane into a slip to try to slide the snake into a corner, but when he touched the rudder bar the snake struck him twice.

Vaught then seized the snake and threw it out.

Almost immediately he began to feel so ill that he made a forced landing in a dry swamp. After fainting several times, he dragged himself to a water hole, where he put a tourniquet on his badly-swollen leg and made a mud pack which relieved the pain somewhat. He thought of scarifying the wounds but decided it was too late to do any good.

During the afternoon he sighted another plane and radioed for help. That night he had to fire his machine guns to drive off wild buffaloes that threatened to damage the plane.

When rescuers had not located him next day, Vaught managed to fit a piece of wood to the left rudder pedal so he could operate it by hand. He made a successful takeoff and returned to his base.

After a period in a hospital, he now has rejoined his squadron.

A Naval Record

Destroyer Shoots Down Four German Bombers In One Attack

The feat of the destroyer Wild Swan in shooting down four German bombers in the course of one attack is so far as can be traced, a record in naval history. If the loss of the other two enemy planes which collided is attributed to the confusion caused by the destroyer's anti-aircraft fire the record is certainly established.

She was quite a veteran, built during the 1918 war and already twice the age of which destroyers are supposed to pass to the scrapheap. The number of these veterans that have put up noteworthy performances is remarkable. Twelve ships of the Reserve Fleet, nearly all over the age-limit, figured in the naval honors lists of the first three months of the war, and others have been cited from time to time since then.

The good workmanship of British shipyards, as well as the devoted attention of their engine-room personnel, is the reason why they are able to hold their place in the fighting line so long after their "effective life" is officially over. Manchester Guardian.

Baseball has grown so popular in many Central and South American countries that it is rivaling the Spanish "sport" of bull-fighting.

Errors Explained

Many Ways In Which Mistakes Can Occur In Printing

Having established, I hope, that printers' errors are rarely the printers' fault, we may now proceed to a few examples.

By misplacing a letter, a machine operated by a compositor of outstanding accuracy once obliged a politician to say what he probably had in mind but did not intend to reveal. Instead of "the masses" it produced "them asses."

A letter's failure to emerge has been known to amend the first line of the Old Hundredth so that it read: "All people that on earth do well." Leeds Yorkshire Post.

Salvage Committees Growing All Across Canada In Drive For Scrap Rubber And Scrap Iron

PLANS to collect salvage from Canadian homes on a scale unknown in the past were revealed at a press conference by G. H. Lash, Director of Public Information; Charles LaFerte, National Salvage Director, and George Piffier, Director of Voluntary and Auxiliary Services. There are now 46 recognized salvage committees in Canadian cities, and this number is growing steadily.

Jewels Being Recovered

Second Lot Of Diamonds From Big Consignment Is Found

Connie, a woman aborigine, has restored to authorities at Broome, Australia, a tube containing $32,000 worth of diamonds from a big consignment lost with a Netherlands plane wrecked on a flight to Australia from Java. She found the tube while searching the sands of Carnot Bay for cigarette butts. A beach-comber recently found a great amount of the diamonds in the same area, 60 miles north of Broome.

Surveying is believed to have originated in ancient Egypt.

Kansas is the largest wheat-producing state in U.S.

Special arrangements have been made with experienced junk dealers for the sorting and sale of the salvage, and huge amounts of vital materials are being secured.

During the past 14 months the Dominion salvage organization has secured 3,300,000 pounds of scrap rubber; 34,000,000 pounds of iron and steel; 5,000,000 pounds of rags, and 725,000 pounds of fats and bones.

Local citizens' committees are co-operating closely with salvage authorities in the matter of collection and disposal of salvage.

"The housewife is the keynote of the plan," Mr. LaFerte said. "It is essential that she is told what we want in the way of salvage, when we want it, why, and how it is to be collected."

Junk-dealers are the best channel through which old useless articles can be diverted into essential war material. Sorting of salvage is highly technical and requires experienced personnel. Profits of junk-dealers are closely controlled by authorities, all steel being taken over by a Crown company under the jurisdiction of the Steel Controller. Prices of the valuable non-ferrous metals are also subjected to control.

Success of the recent salvage drives in cities such as Montreal and Kingston has been sensational. Mr. LaFerte said. A competitive spirit has been aroused among housewives and collections have vastly exceeded expectations.

Profits derived from the sale of salvage are being devoted to recreational facilities for men of the armed services in cities and towns across Canada.

In municipalities where there are garbage collection systems, arrangements are being made for use of the regular garbage trucks and wagons and regular staff to handle the door-to-door salvage collection. This plan has met favorable response from every city where it has been tried.

THE RAILWAY AND THE WAR . . . By Thurstan Topham

A great army of maintenance of way workers forms the backbone of railway operation. Their task is to keep track and bridges in proper condition - one of the vital essentials of the Railways' big war job.

The Sperry Car is the trackman's detective. Its intricate mechanism spots hidden flaws which sometimes develop in high grade track steel. CNR main lines which carry the swift and heavy war traffic are tested regularly by this marvel of modern railroading.

The 6400 bridges of the National Railways System, if joined together, would span the water gap between Hamilton, Ont. and Kingston, Ont. - 167 miles.

R.C.A.F. Flier Rescued After 14 Days Adrift

After his Hampden bomber crashed in the North sea after a raid on the Frisian Islands off the coast of Holland, Pilot Officer Holbrook Mahn of Denver, Col., a member of the Royal Canadian Air Force spent 14 days in a tiny rubber dinghy before he was rescued. Failure of one engine while the aircraft was flying at about 200 feet brought the plane down and it sank almost immediately. Mahn, with one gunner and the navigator managed to climb out and their dinghy was released successfully. The emergency rations were oil soaked but two quart containers of water were intact. For the first day or so, confidence that they would be rescued buoyed their spirits but by the sixth day the water was gone. Shortly after sundown on the eighth day the navigator who had been delirious died and his two companions slipped the body into the sea. Several times aircraft flew overhead but they did not observe the tiny boat. Then the gunner started to drink seawater and on the tenth day he died. "I was so weak I had trouble getting his body out of the boat," Mahn said later. On the 13th day, a seagull lit on the edge of the boat. Mahn was able to grab it by the legs and ate it raw. On the 14th day Mahn heard the throb of a ship's motor and managed to hail. Soon he was wrapped in warm blankets and, as pictured above, in the first photo to reach Canada since his rescue, is well on the way toward recovery.

LABOR FOR TRESHING

Every sign points to an unusually heavy crop this year in the Prairie Provinces. Many young men have left the farms to join the armed forces; countless younger and older men, girls and young women have left to answer the call to work in munition industries. There will, quite evidently, therefore, be a serious shortage of labor to harvest and to thresh this coming crop.

As in similar years in the past there are, however, certain things which can be done. High school boys can be given leave from school, and soldiers from the farms now in training can be given temporary leave from their units to help harvest the crop. Business and professional men in country towns and villages will also be able to assist. Farm neighbors, too, will, of course, help each other.

Above all, however, it seems that the Government should make use of the large quantity of skilled American labor which will soon be available because of the earlier harvest in the U.S.A. northwest. The Canadian and U.S.A. governments merely need to make simple regulations permitting these men to cross the international boundary easily and freely.

This can be done, and it certainly should be done, to help bring in our harvest which will form a most important munition of war.

HARVESTING AND THRESHING A CROP FOR SEED

Many farmers this year will have either a plot or a field from which they expect to secure high quality seed.

As soon as the crop has headed out, it will pay the farmer to walk through the seed field and pull out by the roots any tall weeds or plants of other kinds of grain that do not belong there, and to carry these plants to the end of the field, pile them up and when dry burn them. Then before harvesting, one or two swaths with a mower should be cut around the seed plot or field. When cutting time comes, the canvases should be removed from the binder and the whole machine cleaned thoroughly with a whisk broom, and the kernels that have lodged in the gears and the joints of wood and ironwork should be picked out, the horses' hoofs should be cleaned out and the operator should also turn down the cuffs of his trousers—all this to be sure that no foreign grains will be dropped on the clean seed field.

The stooks of the seed plot should be well separated from the stooks from adjoining fields, so that the field men handling the separator will not mix the stooks from adjoining fields with the seed crop.

W.P.T.B. Notes for Farmers

Standardization of the sale of live-stock feeds in bags to farmers, is designed to effect an improvement in the feed business throughout Canada, according to the Order issued by the Feeds Administrator, Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Content weight and style of package will now be standardized throughout Canada, according to the Order.

Limited to net weights of 100 lbs. are all feeds sold in bags of burlap, jute or cotton, or other fabrics. Feeds sold in paper bags will be limited to the net weights of 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100 lbs.

The net weight of the contents must be tagged or labelled on bags or packages. Retailer packaging from bulk will register the numbers and weights on his invoice.

The Order prohibits information being printed on bags containing feed except on the front surface. Printing dies and plates will thus be standardized, although stocks of bags on hand and printed dies will still be utilized.

Second-hand bags may still be used as containers for feed provided the bags are packed in accordance with new orders. Farmers may also continue to use any bag or container for their own produce when selling or for processing. Thus the farmer's delivery to mills or other processors will be facilitated.

AN OLD CANADIAN CUSTOM . . .

When our pioneer grandparents had a big job to do they called in their neighbours. A barn raising brought help from miles around. Skilled barn framers took charge; sides were chosen and competition between teams lent interest to the work. This old Canadian custom was revived when Canada's National War Finance Committee was formed and went into operation. Under the leadership of the National and Provincial Committees—men experienced in the organization and conduct of financial operations—Local Committees were formed in all communities. Co-operation and competition characterized the work. The biggest "raising" in Canada's history got away to a magnificent start.

WE'VE GOT A BIG JOB TO DO NOW

The War goes on. The National War Finance Committee carries on. Some will serve on the committees organized to promote continued sales of Bonds, War Savings Certificates and Stamps. All of us must continue to buy these securities. We must save every dollar, every cent we can—and lend our money to Canada. We must provide the money required to carry on the war—the money required to win the war.

Our fighters must have more ships and tanks and guns and planes. They must have better ships and tanks and guns and planes than the enemy has. We must all work, and save and lend. The safest investments we can find for our savings are Bonds, War Savings Certificates and Stamps—and they will provide money for us to buy things that we will want when the war is ended.

Fractions and Coupons

How to buy tea and coffee when coupons allow only a fraction of a pound is the problem before the consumer these days. Topping each temporary ration card are the coupons, marked A, B, C, D, E, each single coupon being good for one ounce of tea per person per week or four ounces of coffee per person per week. But it is permissible to use all the coupons at once, to buy five weeks' supply. The five coupons would be good for five ounces of tea, or for 20 ounces, which is 14 pounds of coffee, to last five weeks. Or it could be used to buy half a pound of coffee and three ounces of tea. Each ounce of either beverage will make at least 121 cups.

A family of four adults would have 20 coupons to see them through the five weeks. It would take 16 coupons to buy a pound of tea, and the four coupons left would buy a pound of coffee as well, or could be used to supplement the tea supply if they are the proverbial tea grannies.

Countrywomen usually have a larger household to provide for, often including a farm helper or two. The farmer's wife is entitled to use the ration cards of her helpers when purchasing tea and coffee.

Rationing of tea and coffee hits the risk of shipping. The last tea imported from India took four months to reach Canada.

RED CROSS SPECIAL
By Garry Allighan

LONDON, Eng.—Thirty thousand children without fathers, home or country are being cared for here through the kindness of the Canadian public. They were snatched from under the Nazi jackboot as the Huns were invading the British Isles two years ago. They are the sons and daughters of the Channel Islanders who have been left behind as slaves for their German captors. Two years ago the children were playing happily in the sun-scorched fields of their little islands. Then the sky was darkened with the black-crossed wings of the Nazi raiders and the soil of those ancient isles was fouled with the marching feet of the troops in field grey. A small flotilla of mercy ships raced across the channel to Britain carrying women and children away from the menacing invader.

That was two years ago this summer. Many children were accompanied by their mothers. Many others were entirely alone—their mothers had sent them to safety but had stayed behind to look after their menfolk. Thousands of children without father or mother were brought to Britain's shores and officialdom scratched a worried pate not knowing what to do with such a huge mobile orphanage. It was then that the Canadian Red Cross asserted itself with supreme distinction and threw around those little human derelicts the protecting arms of care and comfort. As each child landed he or she was rigged out in clothes and given footstuffs which the people of Canada had provided.

"Outrivalled All"

That was two years ago and that code of compassion has operated ever since. During the past 12 months 31,986 Red Cross garments have been distributed among those little exiles of the isles.

Hundreds of garments are sent weekly by the Canadian Red Cross to the central clothing store at Halifax, Yorkshire, which Mr. and Mrs. Hall administer without emolument. Shoes and garments made and given by the Canadian women and children are received, unpacked, sorted and sized in one wing. In the other, the little homeless islanders come to be outfitted. The drain on Canadian Red Cross clothing gets greater because as the coupon system becomes tighter the British public cannot afford to give second-hand clothes away.

Need Canadian Clothes

Canadian clothing is particularly appropriate for these French-speaking youngsters of the British Empire because they find the English climate much more severe than the balmy clime from which they have come and warm lumber jackets and thick coats from Canada can alone adjust the temperature of their blood.

Restrictions on Newspapers and Periodicals

In order to ensure that all available ocean transportation space is devoted to war essentials, it has been found necessary to take steps to reduce the volume of newspapers to civilians and the troops in the United Kingdom and other trans-Atlantic destinations as well as to destinations in Central and South America, Bermuda, and the West Indies.

Effective 10th August, complete newspapers or periodicals may not be accepted from the general public for transmission to such destinations. Patrons who desire to mail newspapers or periodicals to destinations affected by this restriction should be requested to forward clippings of special interest instead.

Publishers have agreed to co-operate, and the question of newspapers and periodicals mailed to subscribers to the destinations referred to above is at present under consideration.

Dream Of Designer

Russian Builder Of Planes Aims At Comfort, Not Speed

When Oliver Lyttelton landed in Britain from America he had the distinction of being one of the first passengers to cross the Atlantic in the giant Sikorsky flying-boat Excalibur, whose initial flight was planned as long as five years ago.

American Export Air Lines, Inc., have fought valiantly at Washington for a permit to rival the subsidized Clipper service but Pan-American Airways (who run the Clippers) remained victorious. Now, under war urgencies, the battle is apparently over.

Among other priority passengers in the Excalibur were Lord Moore, personal private secretary to Mr. Lyttelton, and C. R. Morris, Raw Materials Division of the office of the Minister of Production.

The flight is a reminder of the long air history of the designer, Igor Sikorsky. He began building at Kiev early this century; had a hard battle. In 1913 he built the first airworthy multi-motored plane, and during the last war constructed 72 four-motored bombers for the Russians.

His peace ambitions incline to comfort rather than speed. Transoceanic planes with 50 Staterooms, dining-cum-dance rooms, promenade decks, smoking lounges and a library are his target. London Daily Sketch.

Could Be Depended On

Russian Women Would Help On Front Line If Needed

Anyone who calls women the weaker sex hasn't been to Russia. Rocking the cradle or wielding a pick—it's all the same to the distaff half of the Soviet Union.

British United Press Correspondent M. S. Handler took a trip down the Volga river and across the Caspian. And behind the front he saw Russian women doing everything men do and never letting the men get ahead of them.

The hand that rocks the Russian cradle also takes time out to run a locomotive or to operate an oil barge, or to serve as ship's officers, deck hands or stevedores. Correspondent Handler says he's seen Russian women labor for six hours straight lifting and carrying huge packing cases with only brief rest periods. Handler says of Russian women:

"Should the day arrive when they are needed on the front line, Russia would suffer no shortage of women eager and capable of moving into the battle as fighting units."

To Ensure World Peace

Aged U.S. Senator Has Right Idea About Axis Nations

Sen. George W. Norris, Ind., Neb., veteran Liberal member of Congress, proposed on the eve of his 81st birthday that the United Nations prepare to watch Germany, Italy and Japan for "at least 50 years" after this war to guarantee against rearming.

Norris, one of the "little group of wilful men" who opposed United States' entrance into World War 1, said in an interview:

"The peace terms of this war must include complete and total disarmament of Germany, Italy and Japan. Every vestige of armament in those nations must be destroyed, including the factories that are capable of producing those armaments."

"For a period of at least 50 years those countries should be watched to guarantee that they make no new weapons. A committee should be established which would have the authority to visit and report on any plant where it is suspected that they are making munitions."

"When the rulers of the Axis have been destroyed, only the common people will be left. I am confident that they will welcome disarmament and be ready to divert their energies to other channels where humanity can well be served."

Norris predicted that the Axis would go down to a crushing defeat. But should it win, he said, Adolf Hitler will turn on Italy and Japan and "lick his allies."

California Woman Made Sure Dog Would Live In Luxury

Huskie, a little black terrier, will live in luxury for the rest of his life under the terms of a will left by his owner, Mrs. White. She bequeathed the dog her home in Los Angeles, where he is "to sleep in a bed, eat good, lean round steak cooked and fed to him warm, drink clean fresh water, and never be scolded or whipped."

Huskie also receives an expensive automobile so that he may "be taken whenever possible for a ride, whoever drives him to see that he has a nice chicken dinner, not bones but chicken."

When the dog dies, the will provides that he is to be taken to Parker, Ariz., where Mrs. White is interred, "and placed at the corner of my feet."

Mrs. White's parrot, Polly, and her canaries are also provided for in the will, which gives similarly detailed instructions for their care.

Other bequests from the $8,200 estate are made to friends and relatives.

Our Hours Of Leisure

Are Usually Much More Enjoyable After Period Of Work

I think it is almost as important that people should make as good use of periods of leisure as of hours of labor. The period of leisure is becoming ever more important now that it is better assured than it was a generation ago. One of the first essentials to the enjoyment of leisure is that it should have been preceded by a period of work.

I am sure there is not one of the idle rich who really enjoys as much as the man who has worked before he enjoyed his leisure. The man who knows how to spend his leisure in the way which he will really enjoy is going to work all the better for having the prospect of leisure before him. The best use of leisure is change of occupation, and doing things you really enjoy. That is more lasting pleasure than any form of entertainment. Viscount Grey.

SAFEGUARD HEALTH

Excessive hours of work, according to a recent report of the British Industrial Health Research Board, are, excepting for very short periods, utterly wasteful. A maximum work-week of from 60 to 65 hours for men and between 52 and 60 hours for women is recommended for best results during the war. As regards married women, special shifts are recommended so as to safeguard their health, reduce the labour turnover and loss of working time. The provision of the day nursery and other child welfare services for working mothers is a national program in Britain.

A maximum war production program recommended editorially by the Toronto Star suggests the installation of facilities such as are serving the British workers and an increasing number of American workers. These facilities are restaurants where the employees may secure nourishing meals at nominal prices; medical services to prevent the development of serious illnesses, at a price they can afford to pay; rest periods and recreation services to give their minds and nervous systems rest and refreshment.

Britain Is Now Using New System For Reclaiming Rubber

Reclaiming rubber is usually a long and costly process, because it must be re-formed into raw material and then re-manufactured into the article required. But a new system has come into operation in Britain whereby scrap tires are utilized for the direct manufacture of certain articles. The process is simple, and ensures no wastage. The tread and undertread are made into a compound for manufacturing such essential goods as rubber soles for shoes, baby carriages, tires, brake blocks, washers and other items invaluable for mechanical purposes. The body or carcass of the tire is made into other articles, by far the most important being repair patches. Old tires turned into washers for vehicles, insulation and mounting pads, the latter preventing wear and friction when the body is mounted on the chassis.—Brandon Sun.

"ALL THAT GLITTERS"

ANNE TEDLOCK BROOKS

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Tamar slowed her car as she neared the curve in the road where the bridge path joined it. She dropped the coupe just off the path and sat there waiting.

Funny that I have no fear of being alone, after all that I've been through. For a moment she wondered if it were like being inoculated.

The distant sound of galloping hooves reached her ears and she leaned forward to see Christopher Sande coming toward her. He was in the saddle of a beautiful roan with a white star on his forehead, and she wondered where he had borrowed him.

Tamar was bareheaded and dressed in a blue sweater and skirt. She waved to him as he pulled the roan down to a walk. His tanned face bore high color upon his cheeks, and his brown eyes were clear and steady. They lit with pleasure at seeing her. "Hello," she called. "I couldn't get a horse, so we'll have to walk or ride in my car."

Christopher slid out of the saddle, and holding the bridle in one hand walked up to the car and put out the other hand. "It's good to see you, Tamar. We were all worried terribly. There are no words to tell you."

She dismissed the subject with an attempt at light laughter. "Let's not think about it and ruin this wonderful morning."

"Lock your car and I'll tie my horse and let's walk along the path. Look at the foliage on the trees. Isn't it beautiful with the sun glinting on it?" Christopher threw the reins across the accommodating branch of a nearby tree, and Tamar turned the key in the coupe.

They walked down the path together, he stooping occasionally to pull back trespassing vines across it. Here underneath the ancient trees the sun crept through in lacy leaf design. It was so quiet that an occasional red squirrel looked out inquisitively and then scampered up the tree trunk.

To the side of them flowed the Chestatee, now lazily with the golden sparkle of sun upon it, now flashing in a myriad of colors over a small natural waterfall, or blurring over brown stones imbedded in old folds.

Tamar looked ahead and saw the span of the bridge that connected the two main highways. It seemed too artificially man-made here in this perspective. She and Ranny had watched the men working on it the summer it was built, and they had been too close to danger for the good of her conscience many times.

Ranny had always dared to do the impossible, and she must follow lest he think her dull. She brushed the thought from her impatiently. Why must the remembrance of him clambering about on the trestles come at this moment!

"How is your work going now at the Cricket Hill?" she asked to start some form of conversation.

"Very well. We have gone into that vein of the mother lode, and the assay is very high. We'll soon replace the gold bricks that were stolen, even if they're never recovered."

This was commonplace talk, safe and not dangerous to continue.

"Has there been any clue to the missing gold?"

"None whatever. I think every one was so busy looking for you that the gold was forgotten." He smiled at her and added: "Of course, they've got men on the case. But I doubt if ever they locate it, or even find out who took it. The Major is bringing suit for his incarceration in the city jail."

Tamar looked at him out of steady blue eyes. "The Major is playing with fire to get up before a court to have questions shot at him." She saw that he was startled, and added: "I can't tell you any more than that!"

She said abruptly after a silent moment: "I hear that you were out of town for a few days."

He nodded. "Yes, flew to Boston and stayed a day and a half. I came back as soon as I found out about you and the hold-up of the armored truck. The Major —" he broke off. He had started to say the Major was apoplectic when he talked with him, but reconsidered.

Then he was here night before last, she was thinking.

She walked along swinging her arms, rhythmically, keeping up with Christopher's stride. "Do you remember the week you spent here, we promised ourselves to go attend one of the colored church meetings?"

"Oh, yes, I do remember. I remember so many things about that week."

"Remember my showing you the burial ground for the Shadwell horses?"

"Of course," the expression of his eyes did not change. "I can see the shaft of the famous horse rising from the lot, at a certain hill close to the mine. From the top of the hill, I get a very fine view of all of Shadwell."

Tamar did not dare go back to discuss the shaft of Tahlhneka I. It would be dangerous to say more about it, unless she intended to tell him where the ransom money had been placed. That information had been kept from the reporters. They had only published that the payment had been made.

Tamar wanted to forget about everything that pertained to her recent experience. She wanted to ask him about Selby and discuss things of a more personal nature, yet, she could not bring them to the surface. Selby's voice had vibrated with happiness over the wires this morning. Tamar knew there was only one secret that Selby would have to tell her. And it concerned the man by her side.

Suddenly, Tamar was aghast with the thought that had just occurred to her. The pain that had engulfed her heart the evening that Selby and her brother had eaten dinner with them, had disappeared. She remembered how like a leaden thing her body was as she went back to her room hours after they had gone. That had been the first she had thought that more than a mild flirtation existed between Selby and Christopher.

But that night she had been sure that Selby was thinking of marriage.

Anyone could have seen that she was in love with Christopher. And Tamar knew that she had been able to hide her own feelings toward him.

But this new feeling—it was like a sweet clear breath of fresh air flooding over her, leaving her refreshed and happy. She was not in love with Christopher Sande!

Christopher looked at her in astonishment. The change that had come over her had miraculously washed a haunted look from her eyes, which now shone in friendly gaze upon him. He felt the uneasiness which he had known over this meeting, leave him as suddenly.

"Look, Tamar," he said boyishly. "I want you to be the first to know. I rate you as a very close friend."

She laid her finger across her lips. "Don't spoil it, Chris. I'm going calling tonight and the important part of the evening's program is a secret that is going to be confided to me."

"They stood still on the path by the river and he grinned down happily at her. "May I ask just one question?"

"Of course. You want to know where I'm going. Dick Sheridan is coming after me for dinner. Selby owns the secret."

"That's perfect." He caught up her hand and she could not forbear to offer congratulations.

"Selby is the dearest girl in the world," she said softly. "And more congratulations continued the next time I see you. I think now that I'd better go back to Shadwell. I know Dad will be jittery every time I leave the house for a while."

As Tamar drove back to the house she was thinking only the most pleasant of thoughts about the approaching marriage of Selby and Christopher. It is the only time that Selby has ever been in love, she told herself. It will be fun to go to Boston to see Selby in her new home. And Christopher was splendid. He would be a wonderful husband—for Selby.

But what for the moonlight and the walk along the river bank when she had wished it would last forever? She brushed it determinedly aside—just moonlight or the river, or just in love with love. Her eager hands turned the car into the drive, and she laughed to see the guineas clacking their alarm so defiantly.

A wonderful morning. A marvelous day. Good to be alive and at Shadwell. Good to see Aristotle pretend sudden interest in the raking of the brown leaves on the northern terrace. Funny to see how small the piles he had already gathered.

Good to see Madeap's little colt by the bars waiting for some one to come to pet him, now that Madeap herself was no longer there.

Over the roof of the house a spiral of whitish wood smoke plumed into the air. That meant that some one had legs going in the fireplace in the living room. Tamar stood vibrant and glowing, drinking in the crisp air. Then she laughed happily and ran to jump over the little low wall that she and Ranny had always used for a hurdle to show off their athletic prowess.

Tamar paused on the wide steps of the verandah. Turning into the drive was the unmistakable motorcycle that had stayed so close the past few hours. She had thought it seemed good to have a clear drive once more without reporters or patrol cars cluttering it, as she drove in. Now she gave an impatient shrug of her shoulder.

DID YOU KNOW THAT:

A railway tunnel underneath Brockville, Ontario, has doors that open and close at both ends. It was designed that way to keep out the cold in winter!

ders. She wished it were all over. "Dad!" she called softly up the stairs. Perhaps he was in the small library off his room.

"Yes, coming, Tamar." She heard his step. It sounded eager, I've news, Tamar."

She ran toward the landing, but he said, "Let's go back down to the fire. I think we might have Phoebe bring us in some lunch, and I'll tell you afterwards. I think —"

A heavy knock broke into his words. "That's the policeman who has recently obtained half interest in Shadwell," she said merrily.

Her father laid a heavy hand on her arm. "I know what he wants, Tamar. There's a little matter of identification —"

She looked at him, eyes dilated. "You mean?"

"Louie's plane crashed this morning. He hit a down draft in the mountains and crashed into the hillside." (To Be Continued)

SMOOTH LINES AWAY BY RIGHT MASSAGE

Learn Modern Beauty Methods

Those tell-tale lines around the eyes and mouth! They are signs of age which, fortunately, you can put off a long, long time if you learn scientific beauty methods.

A trained beauty operator would provide special massage to tighten the drooping temple muscles that cause crow's-feet. And you can give yourself the same professional treatments.

After cleansing the face thoroughly, work cream into the skin, kneading and stroking upwards on the forehead from just in front of the ears to the hairline and from the eyebrows to the hairline, as the diagram shows.

Now knead and stroke outward from the outer corner of each eye. Follow with a brisk patting with cream and a final patting with astringent.

How to correct drooping mouth corner, a double chin? Expert facial treatments are explained in our 32-page booklet. Tells how to apply make-up, care for hair and hands. Advises on correcting dry and oily skins, coarse pores and blackheads, removing superfluous hair.

Send 15 cents in coins for your copy of "How To Give Beauty Treatments" to Home Service Dept., Winnipeg Newspaper Union, 175 McDermot Ave. E., Winnipeg, Man. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and name of booklet.

COMPLETELY FED UP

The colored minister called all his flock together one evening in late summer.

"Brothers and sisters," he said. "You all know I've been preachin' to dis congregation about fo' years now. Every fall, at hog-killing time, all I gets is pigs' feet, and no' pigs' feet. Now I'm goin' to tell you folks somethin'; ef I preaches to dis congregation any longer, I simply has got to eat higher up on that hog!"

The tank has been replacing the camel in desert warfare. But there's one drawback—the tank can't go a week without a drink.

Alberta Pacific Reduce Both Street and Carlot Spread

The Alberta Pacific Grain Company has reduced by one and one-half (1½) cents a bushel the spread in the handling of "street" wheat and has also reduced by one (1c) cent a bushel the spread in the handling of "carlot" wheat delivered to the Wheat Board through the Alberta Pacific elevators for the 1942 crop year.

This means not only that the "street" spread in Board wheat handled by Alberta Pacific elevators will be eliminated and that farmers who deliver on that basis will receive the carload price but also that farmers delivering "street" wheat will benefit by one and one-half (1½c) cents a bushel and farmers delivering "carlot" wheat will benefit by one (1c) cent a bushel as compared with last year's charges.

The Wheat Board has been advised accordingly.

The well-known reputation of the A.P. for thirty years is that it has never trailed behind anyone in prices and grades given for the farmer's grain.

Temperature Saving
TIPS that save
Electricity too!

1. Don't open the door more than you have to, as door opening lets warm air rush in and gives your refrigerator more work to do.
2. Don't put hot foods in your cold refrigerator. This frosts it up unnecessarily. Cool foods first.
3. Save on Ice Cubes. You don't need to be stingy, but why empty trayful after trayful before you know your friends want beverages iced.
4. Don't have your refrigerator right next to the range. The cooler the spot the less your refrigerator has to work.
5. Don't let too much frost accumulate before defrosting. The excess frost acts as an insulator and wastes power.

Your electric refrigerator is constructed and mechanically engineered so that it will always maintain the exact temperature required for safeguarding the freshness and nutritive value of your foods. A little co-operation on your part, however, will increase its efficiency, lower its operating cost, and extend its years of service.
